At the Exceptional Women Alliance (EWA), we are proud to foster a community where high-level women mentor and empower one another through shared experiences and sisterhood. This month, I am honored to introduce Ena Hull, a dynamic leader in higher education with over 20 years of experience in the vocational and trade industry. Ena's insights into the evolving challenges and opportunities in higher education, from rising costs and shifting demographics to the increasing relevance of vocational training and micro-credentials, offer valuable guidance for navigating today's complex educational landscape. Join us as we explore her perspective on shaping the future of learning and workforce development.
